In recognition of the services of James M Campbell for the Imperial Gazetteer the then British Government appointed him as compiler for the task of publishing Gazetteer volumes for the districts of the Bombay Presidency in June 1873.

In the words of H.D. Quin the then Secretary to Government. "The task now brought to a close by Mr. Campbell has been arduous. It has been the subject of his untiring industry for more than ten years. He could not have sustained the unflagging zeal displayed by him for so long a period without an intense interest in the subjects dealt with".

"Sir James M Campbell commenced the Bombay Gazetteer in 1873 and issued the last volume in 1901. It was his intention to render the contents of this great work more accessible to the public by the issue of a General Index. Illness leading to his much deplored death in 1903, stood between the design and its accomplishments. It has been my privilege, under the orders of Government, to supply the missing volumes", says Mr. R.E. Enthoven in 1904.
