

Mumtaz Ali Krishna Raja Wodeyar at the time of Coronation

The rule of Haider Ali and Tipu Sultan (1761 A.D - 1799 A.D)

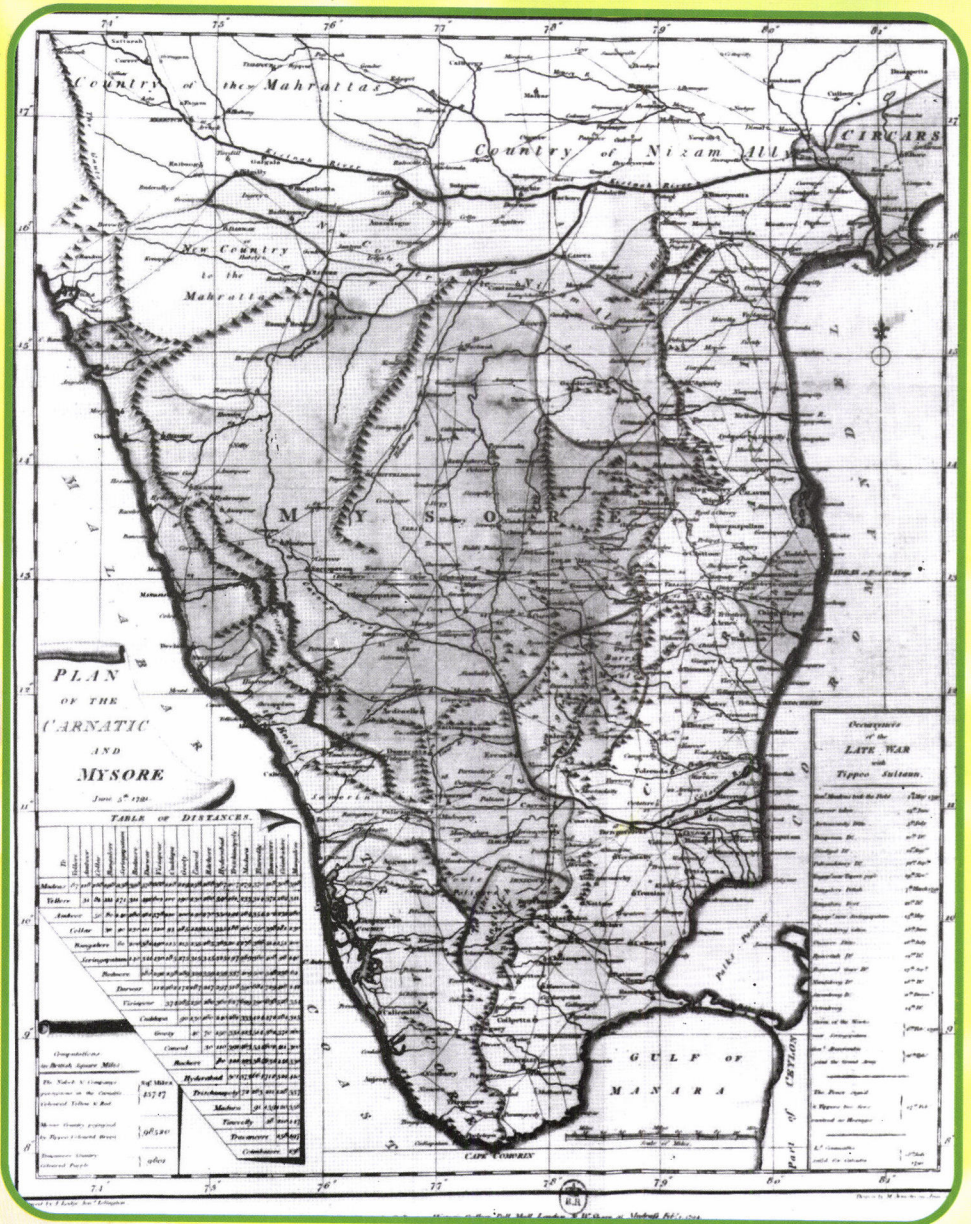

Map showing the Empire of Haider and Tippu Sultan

Karnataka, after the fall of Tipu Sultan (1799 A.D)

Map showing Karnataka after Tipu Sultan (1799AD)

Map South India Indicating Carnatic and Mysore

Coins of Tipu Sultan

An overall View of the Fort St. George

A view of the Military Camp of Arcot

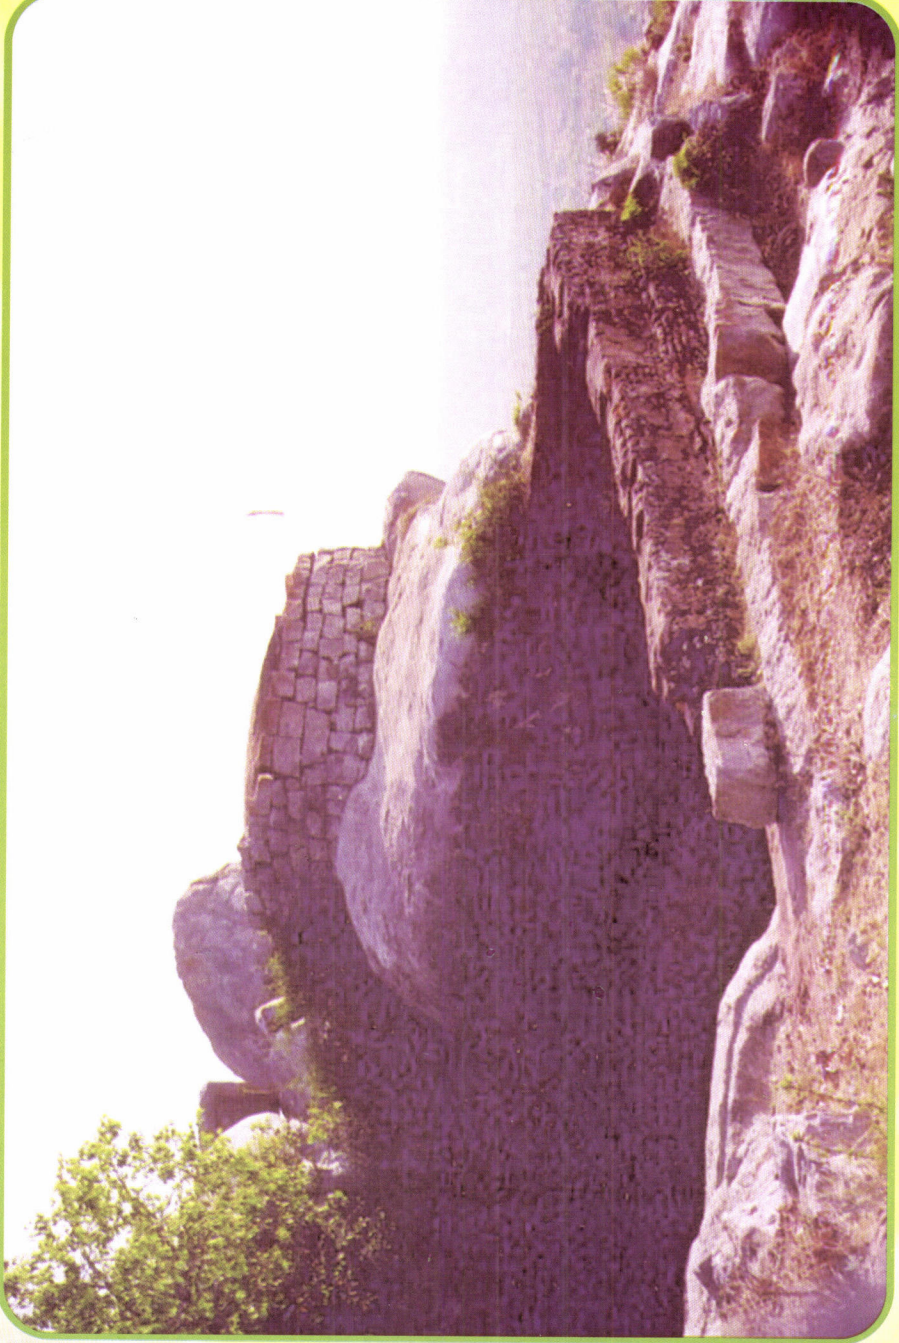

A side view of the Vellore Fort

Vijayendra Swamy with his Consorts, Bethmangala

View of a Bastion at Tekal Fort, Malur Tq.

A View of Fort, Bangalore

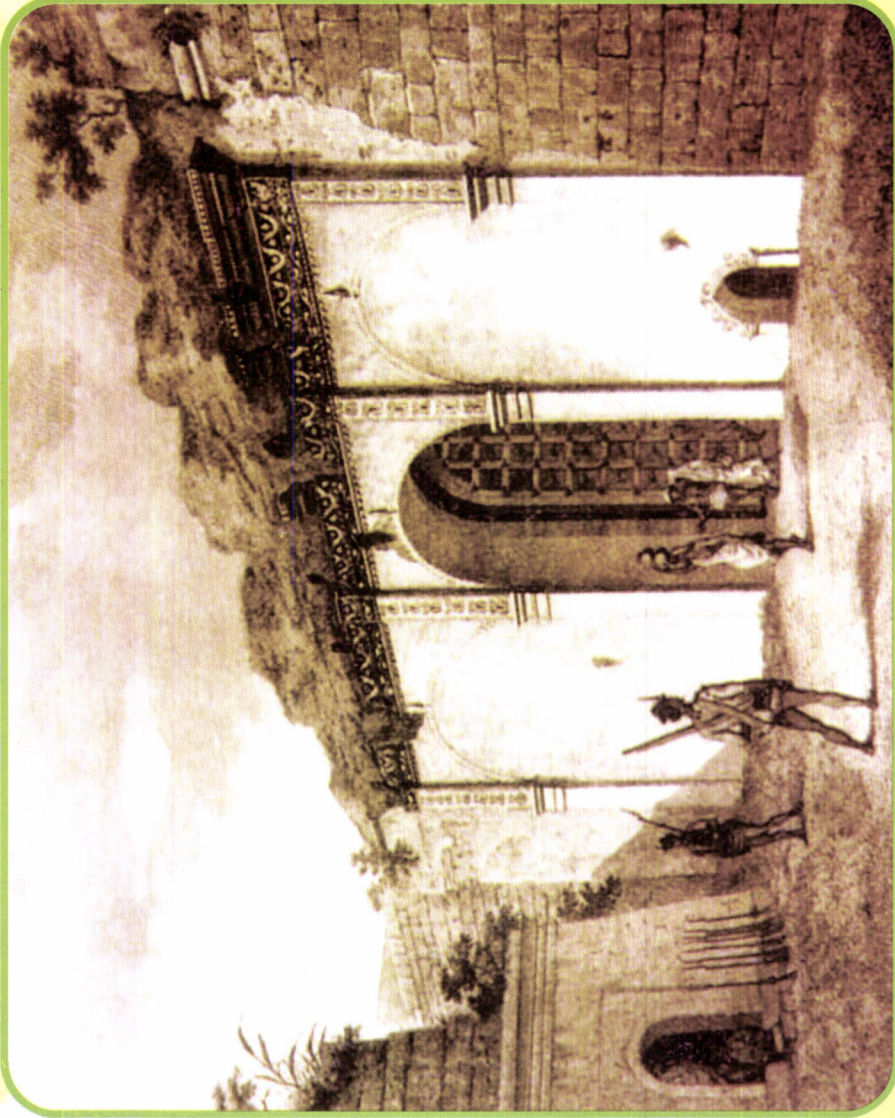

North View of Bangalore from the pettah, showing the curtains and Relations that breaches.

A view of the Delhi Gateway, (After it was Repaired , Bangalore)

South Entrance into the Fort of Bangalore

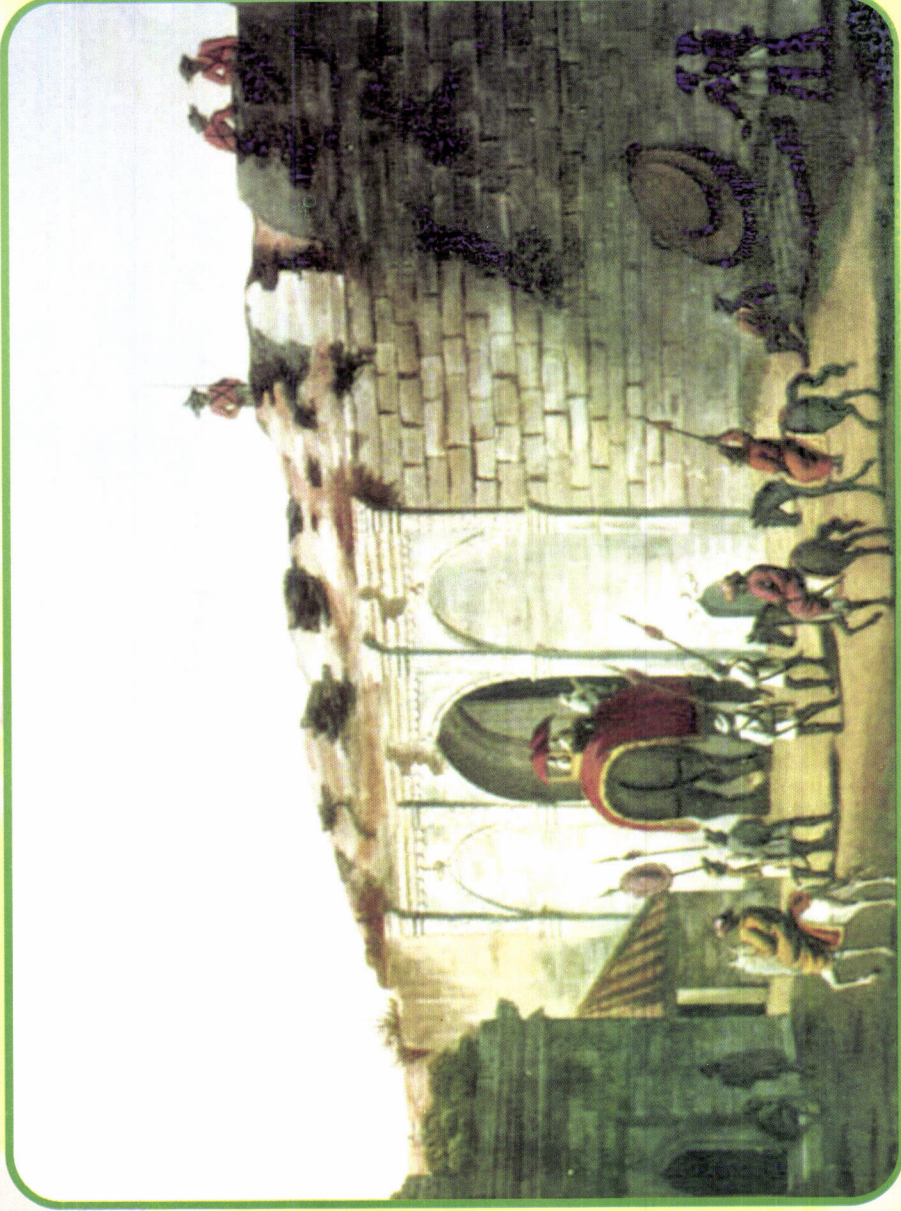

Inner View of the Bangalore Fort

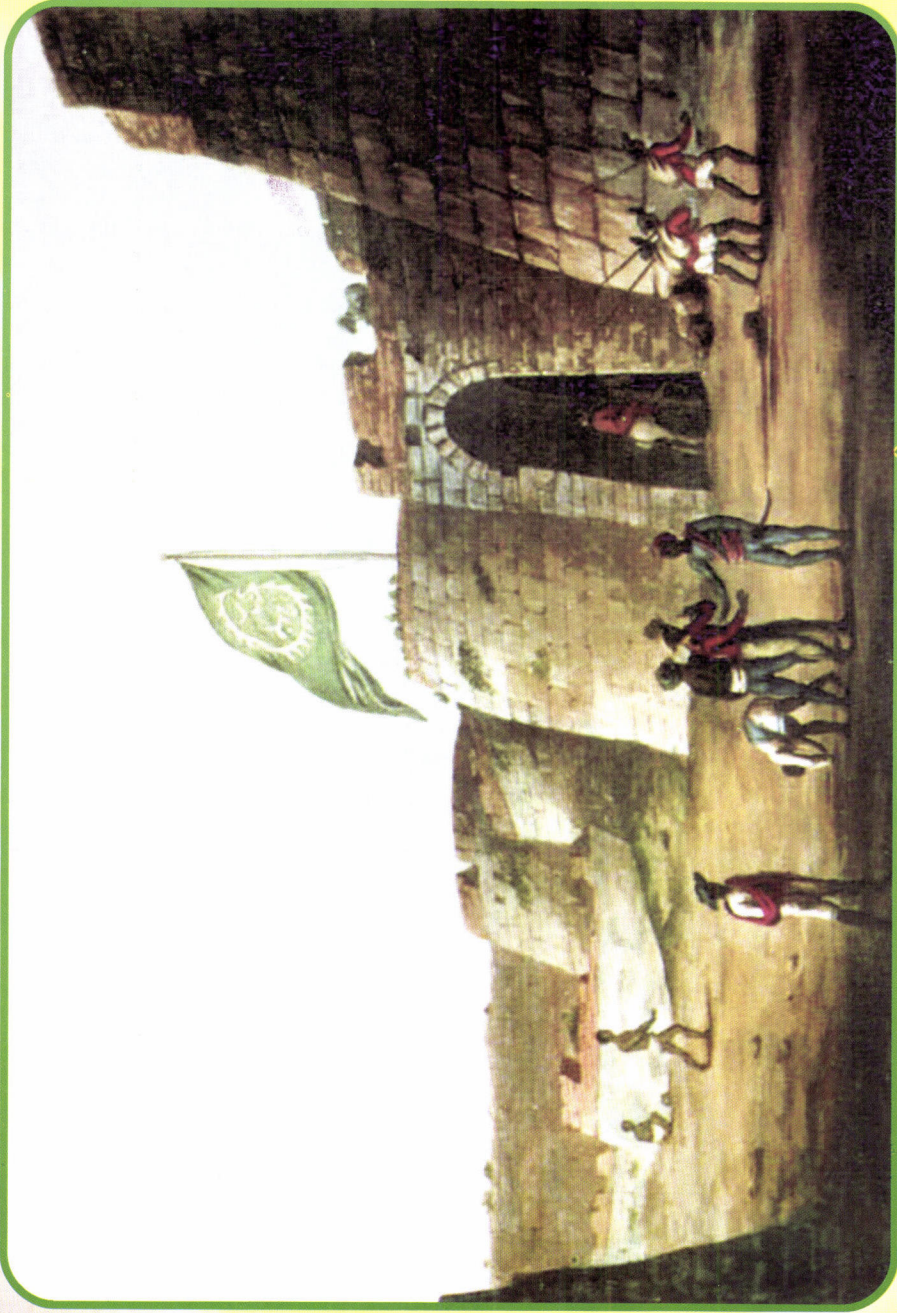

The Mysore Gateway, Bangalore Fort

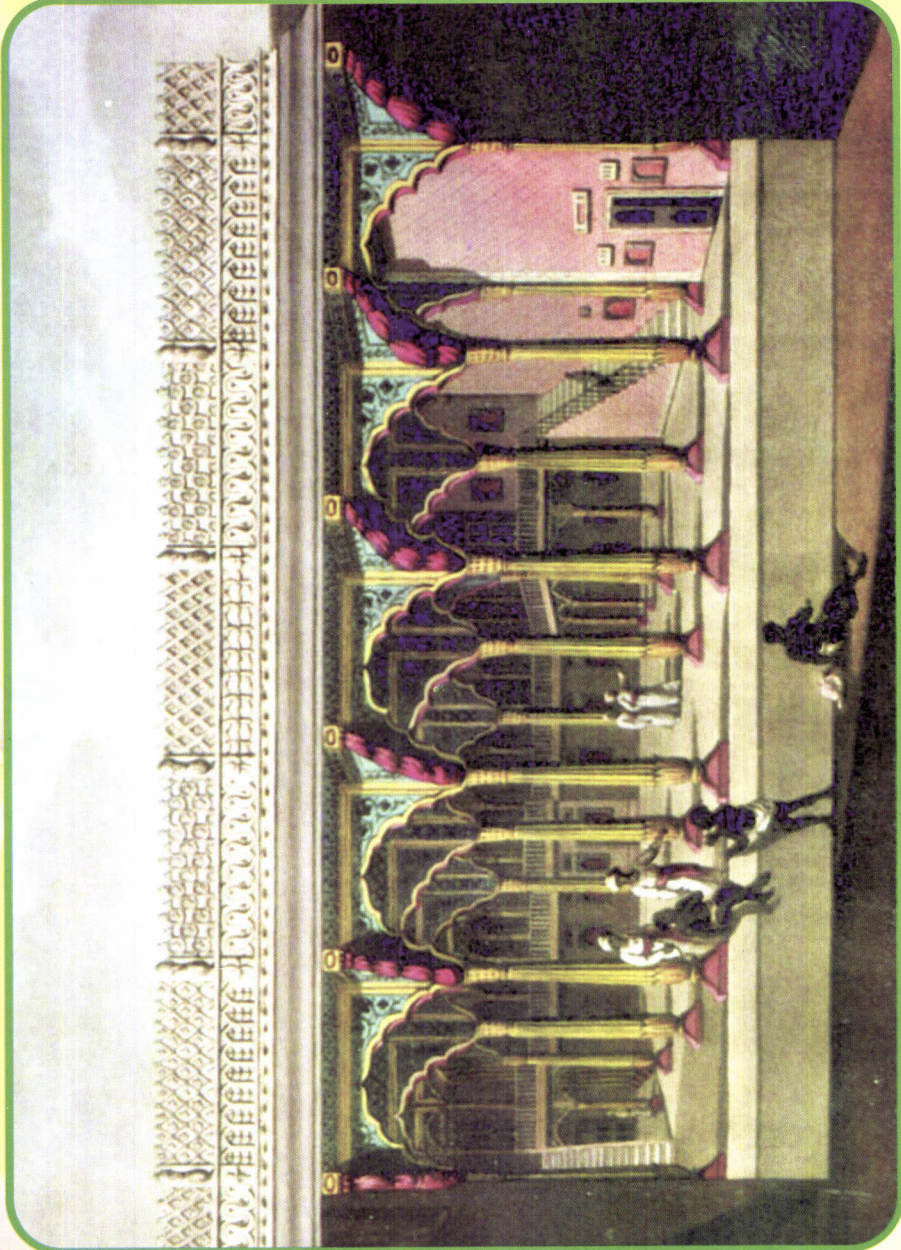

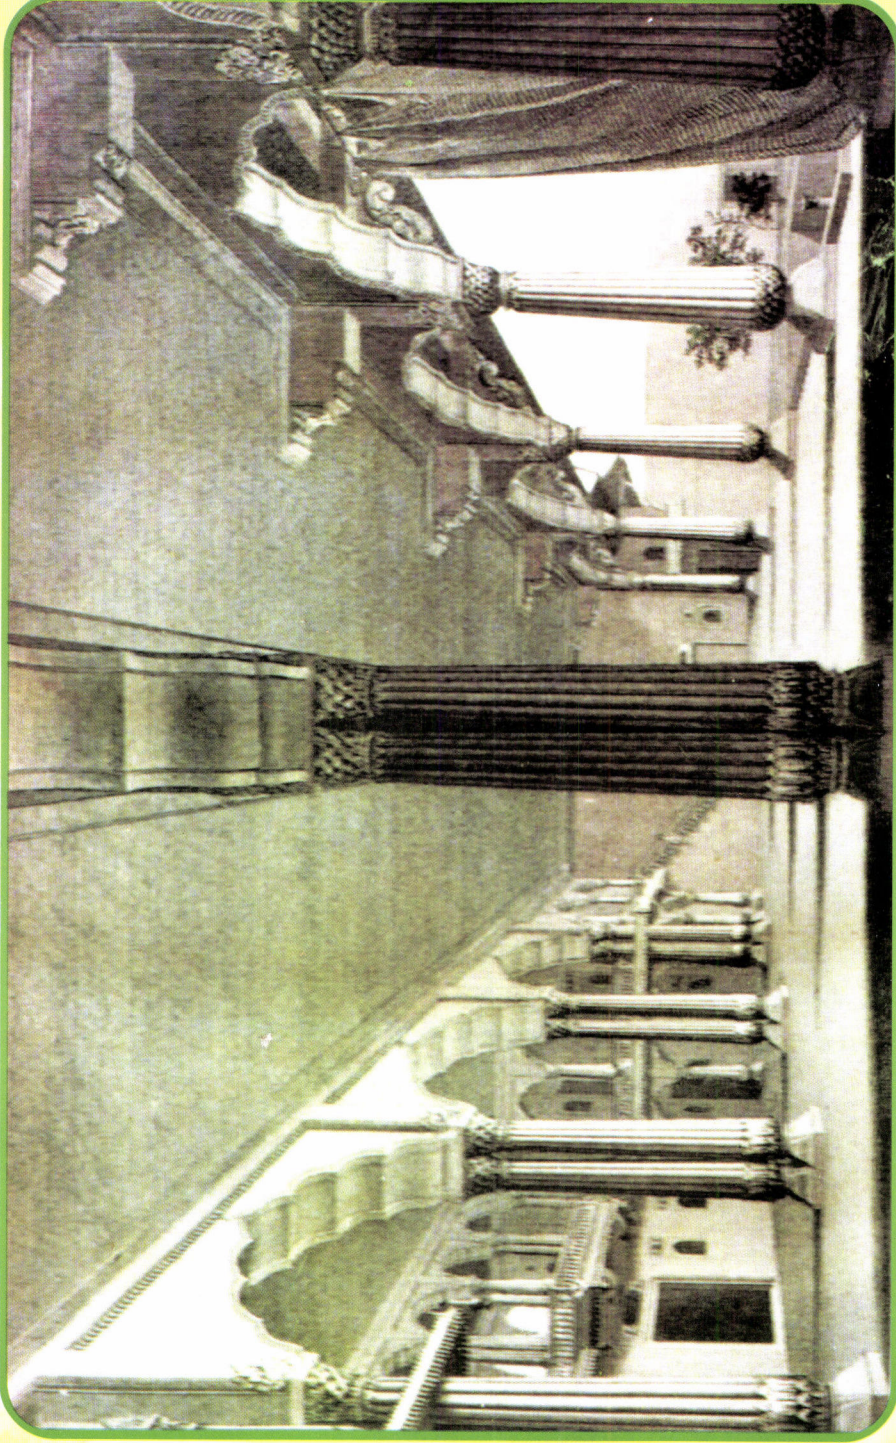

A Band of Soldeirs and Horsemen at Bangalore Fort

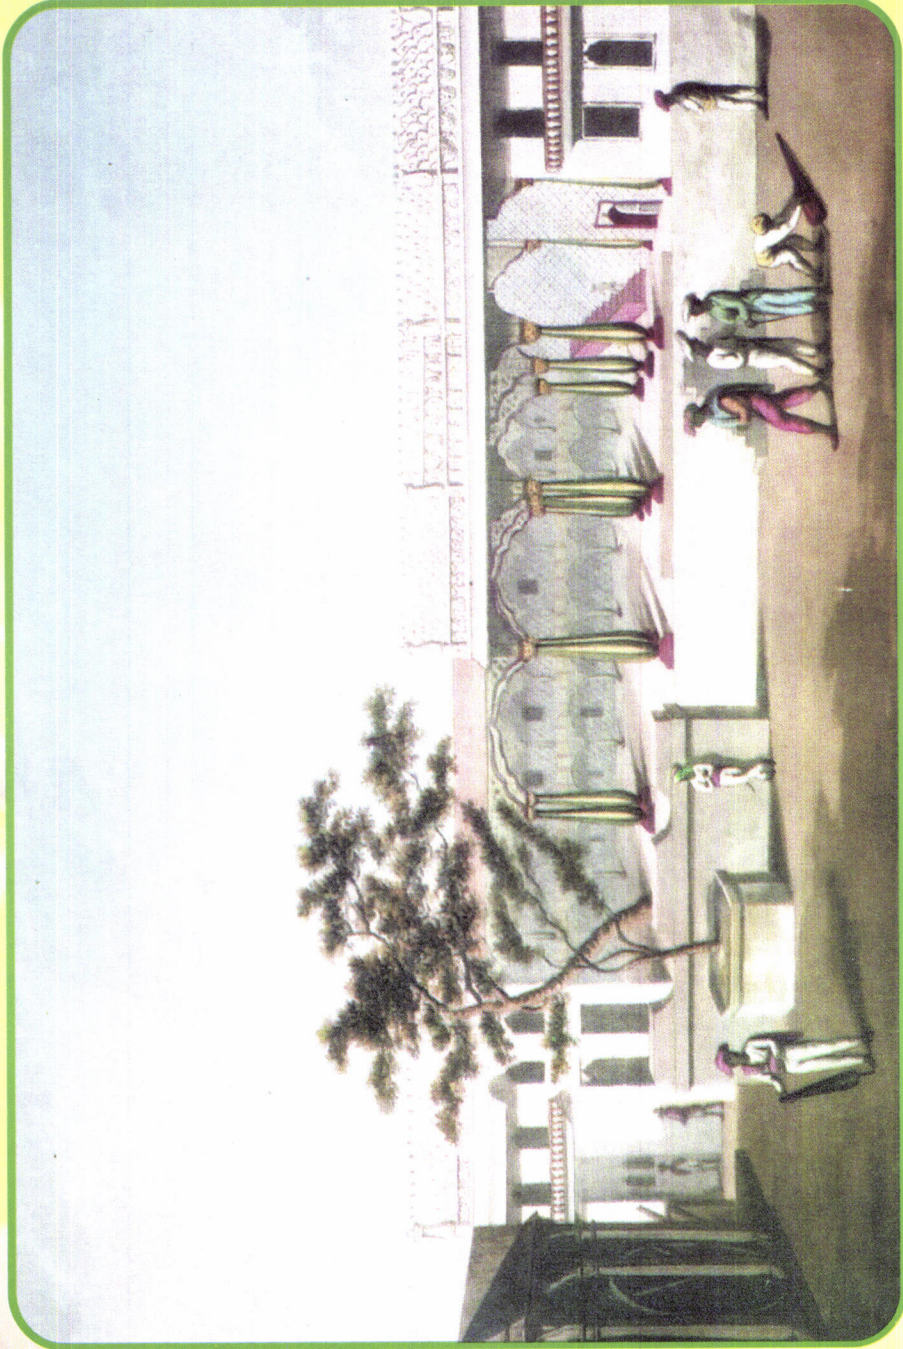

A Military routine at North Entrance of Bangalore Fort

West Front View of Tipu's palace, Bangalore

West Front of the interior of Tipu's palace, Bangalore

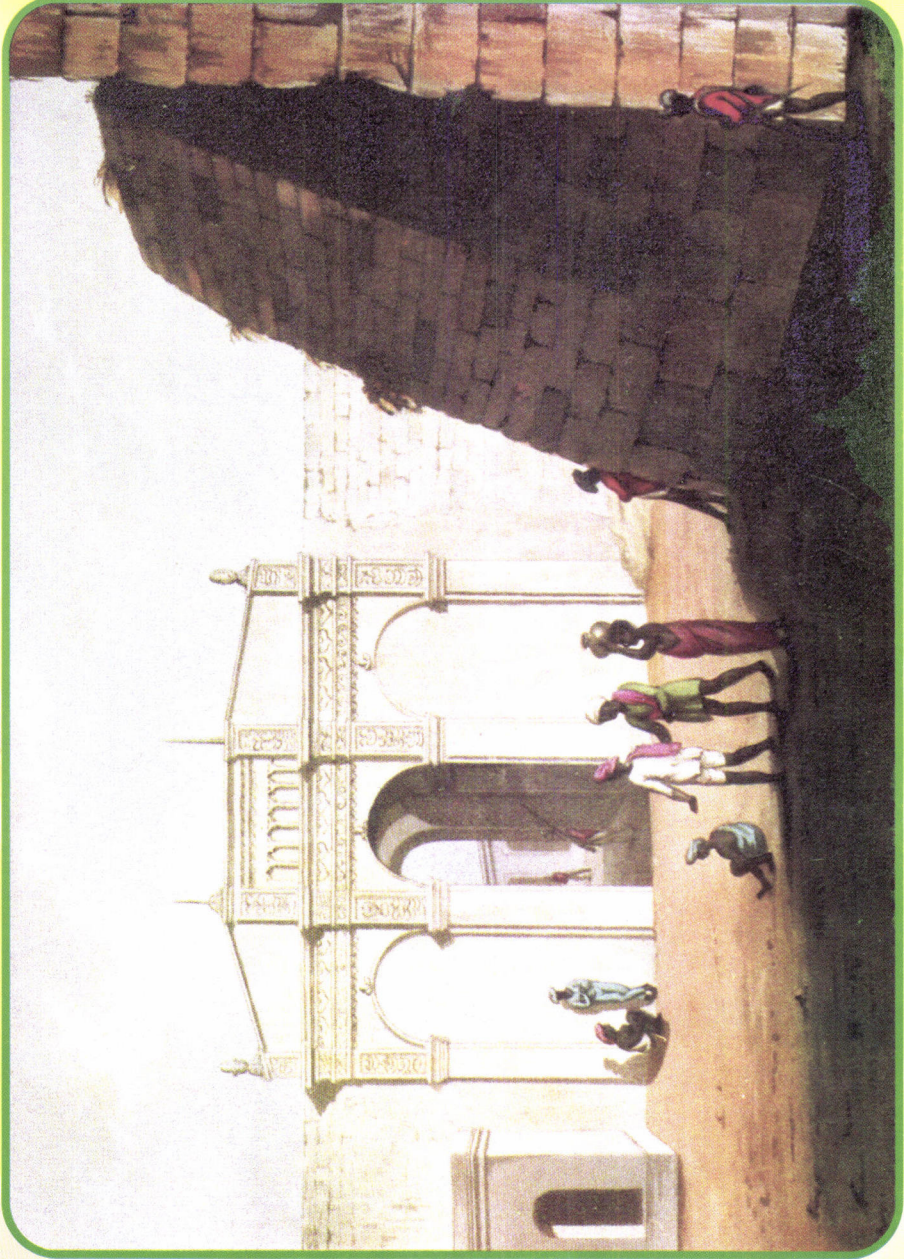

Another interior view of Tipu's palace, Bangalore

An Interior view of Tipu's palace, Bangalore

Military Exercise inside the Tipu's palace, Bangalore

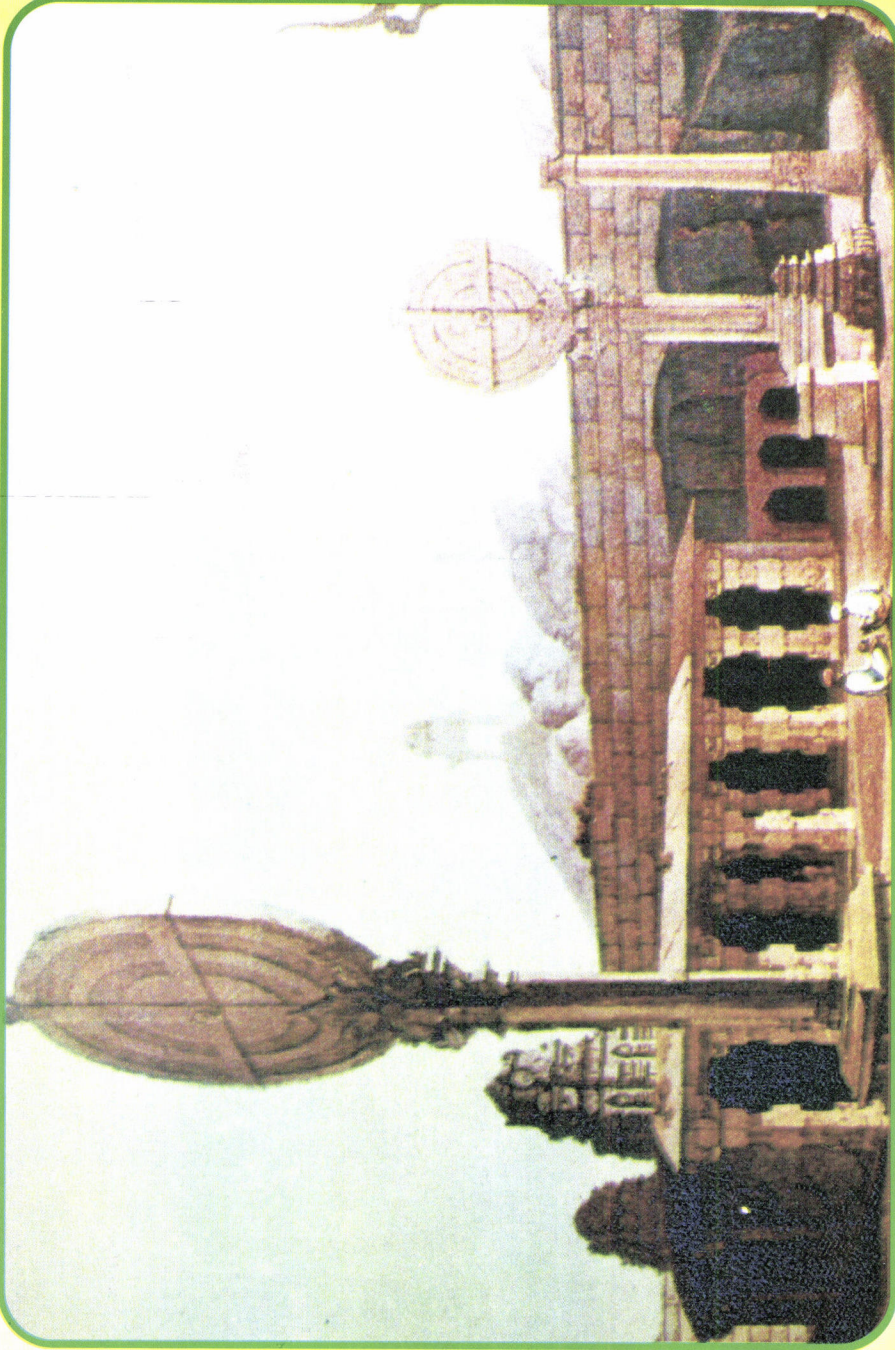

Inner view of Bangalore Fort

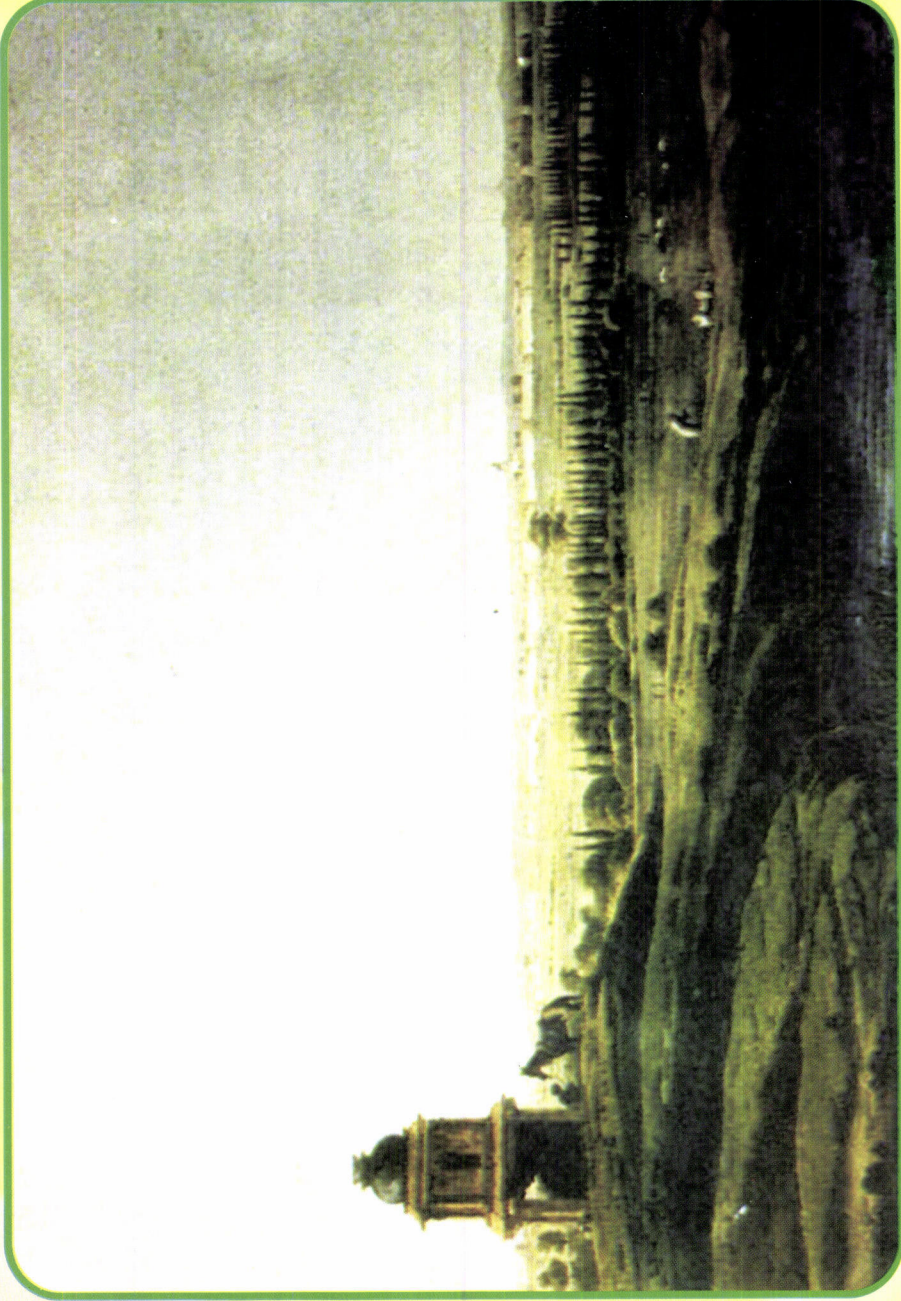

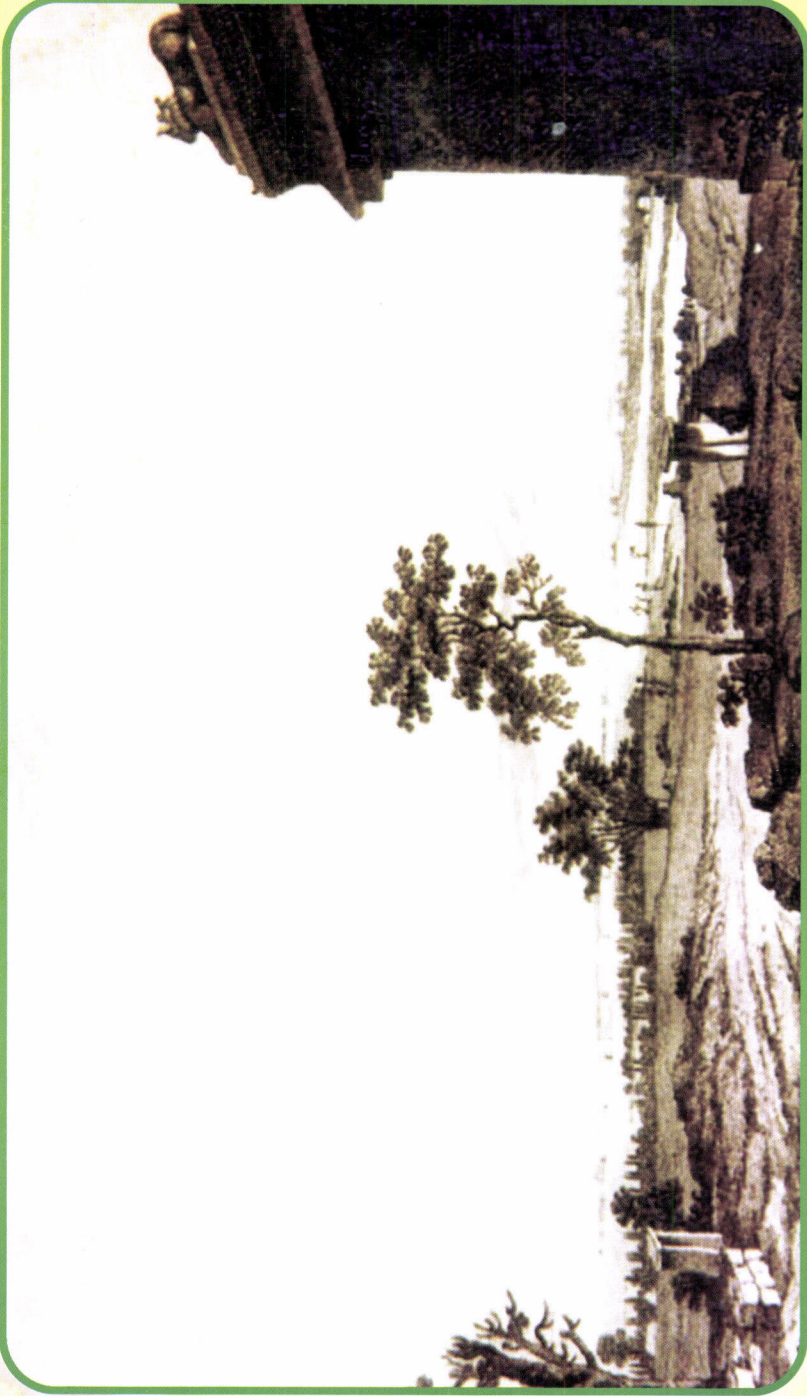

A view of Gavi Gangadhreshwara Temple, Bangalore

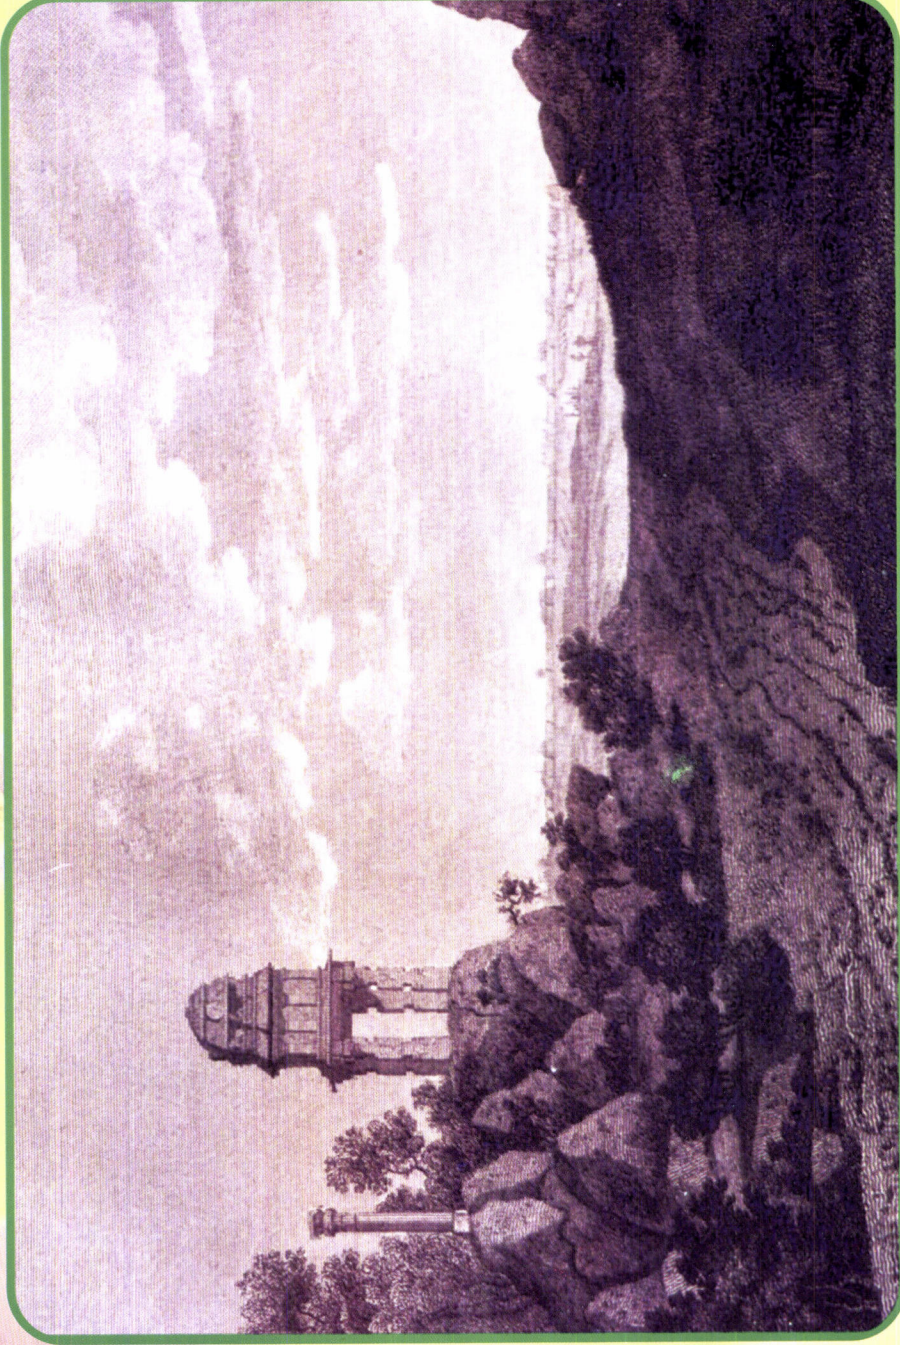

Another view of Gavi Gangadhreshwara Temple Bangalore Fort

East View of Bangalore, later called Cyprus Garden

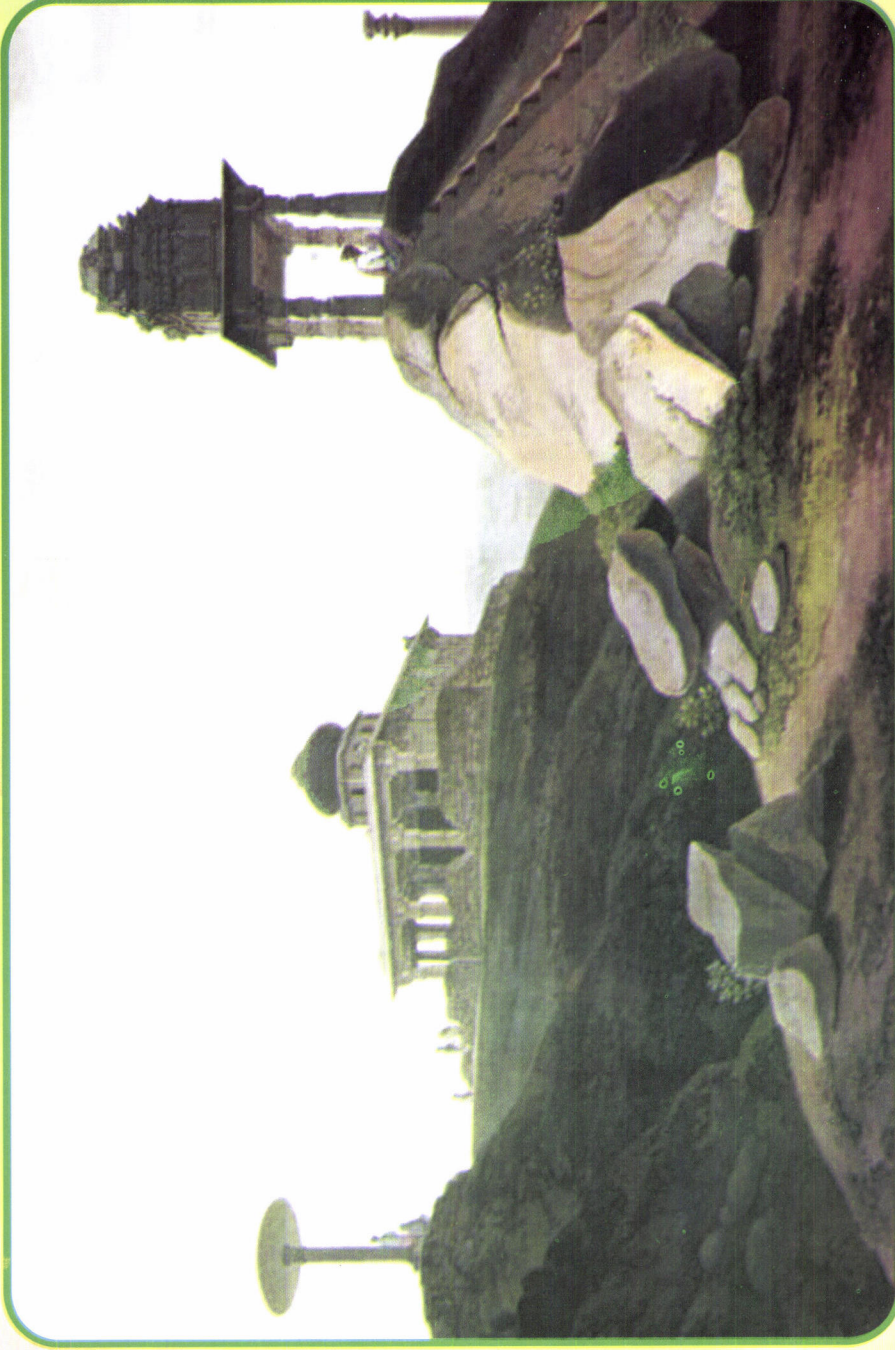

Another view of the Cyprus Garden, Bangalore

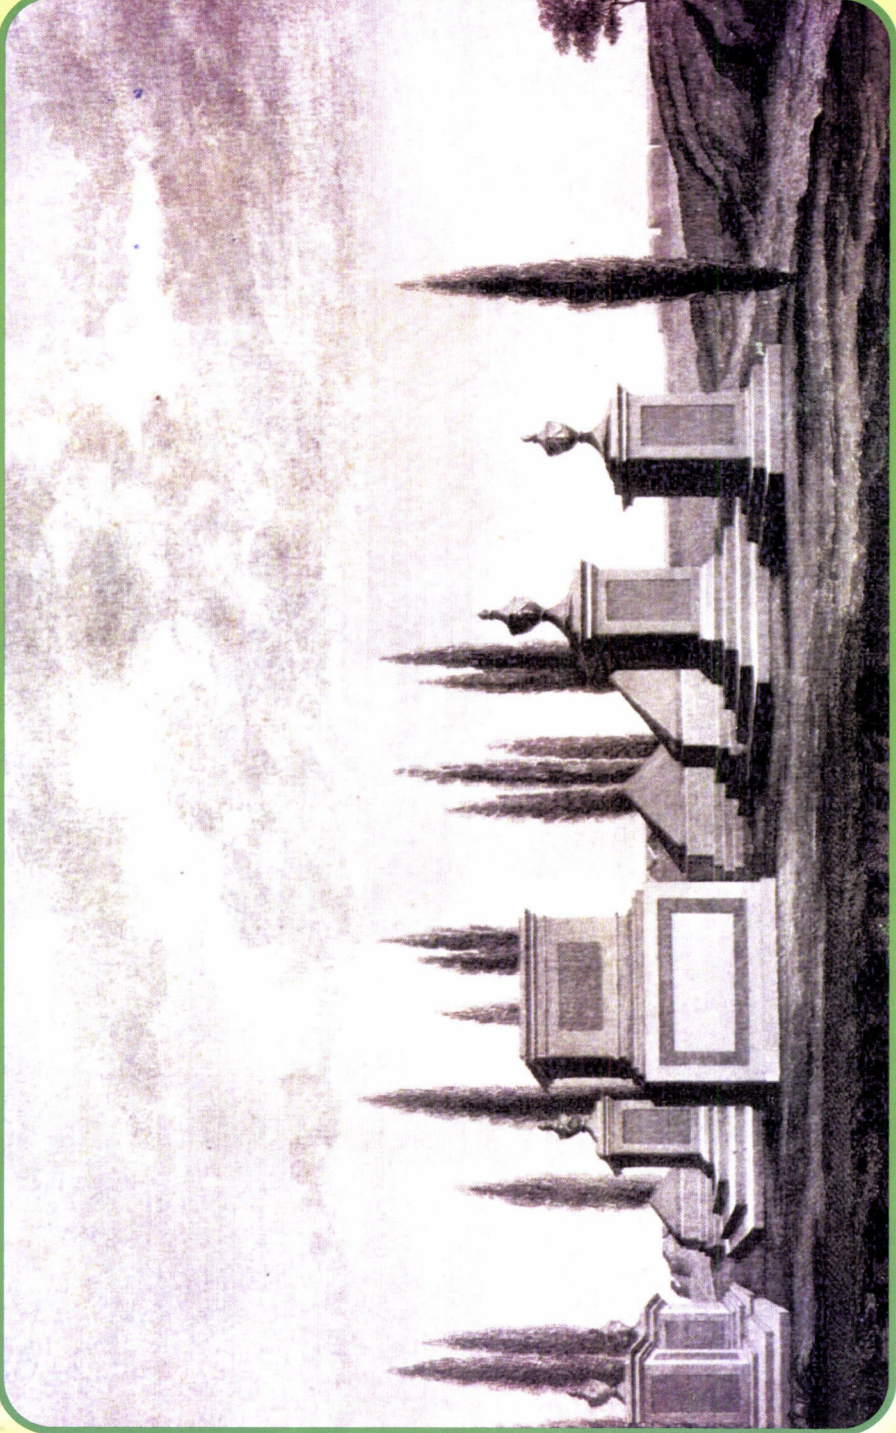

A tower close to the Srirangapattana Road, Bangalore

A Distant view of Savanadurga, Magadi Tq.

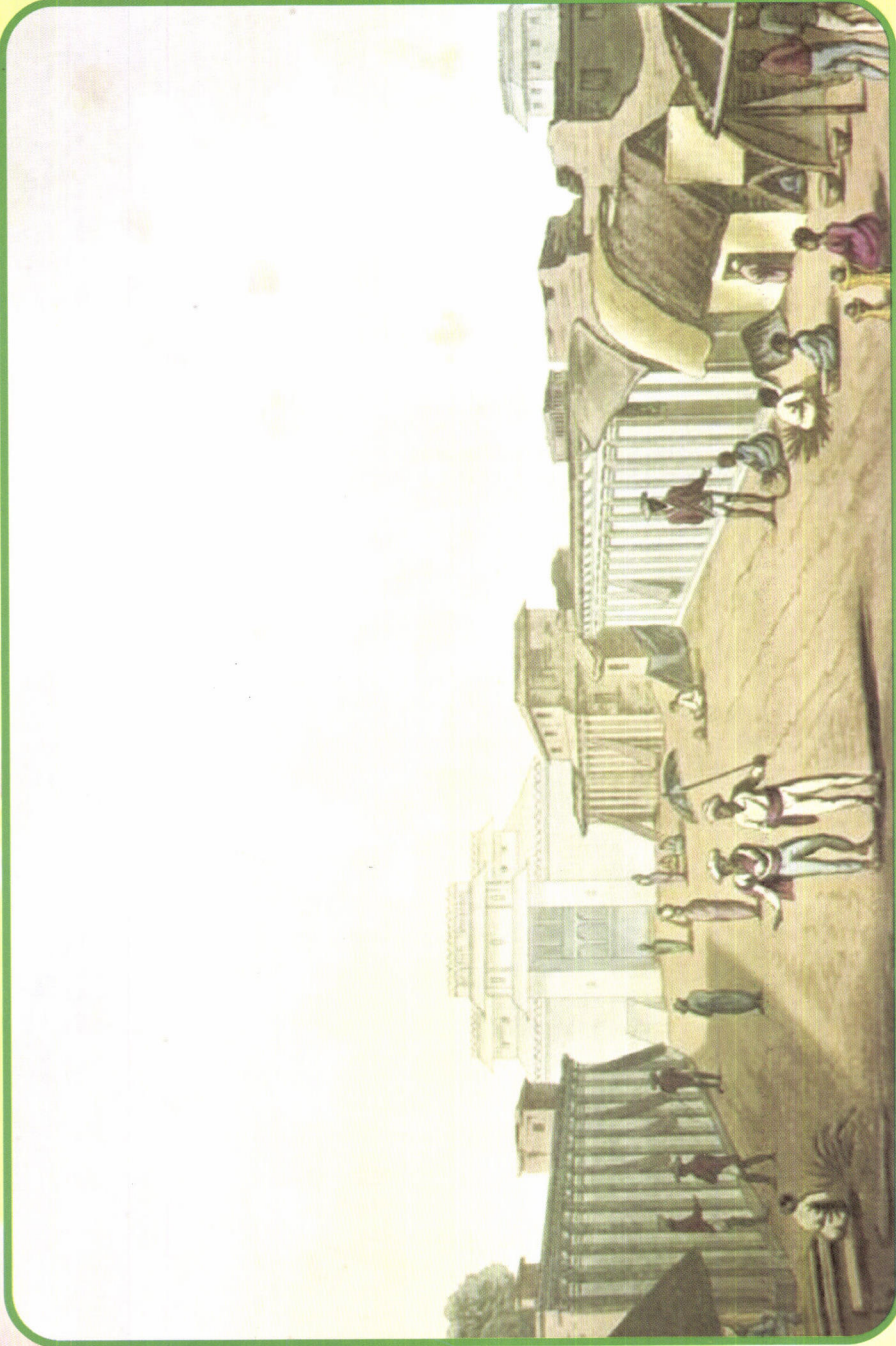

A view of the Harihara Rajana Gudda, Bangalore

A Cemetery of British Officers, Bangalore

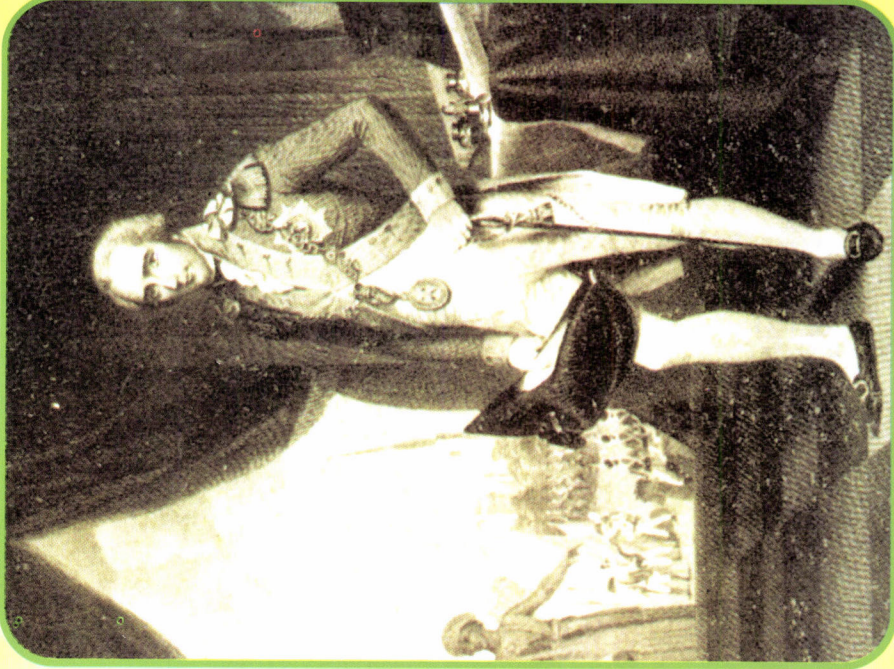

A view of the Road in the Petea area, Bangalore

Colonel Arthur Wellesley

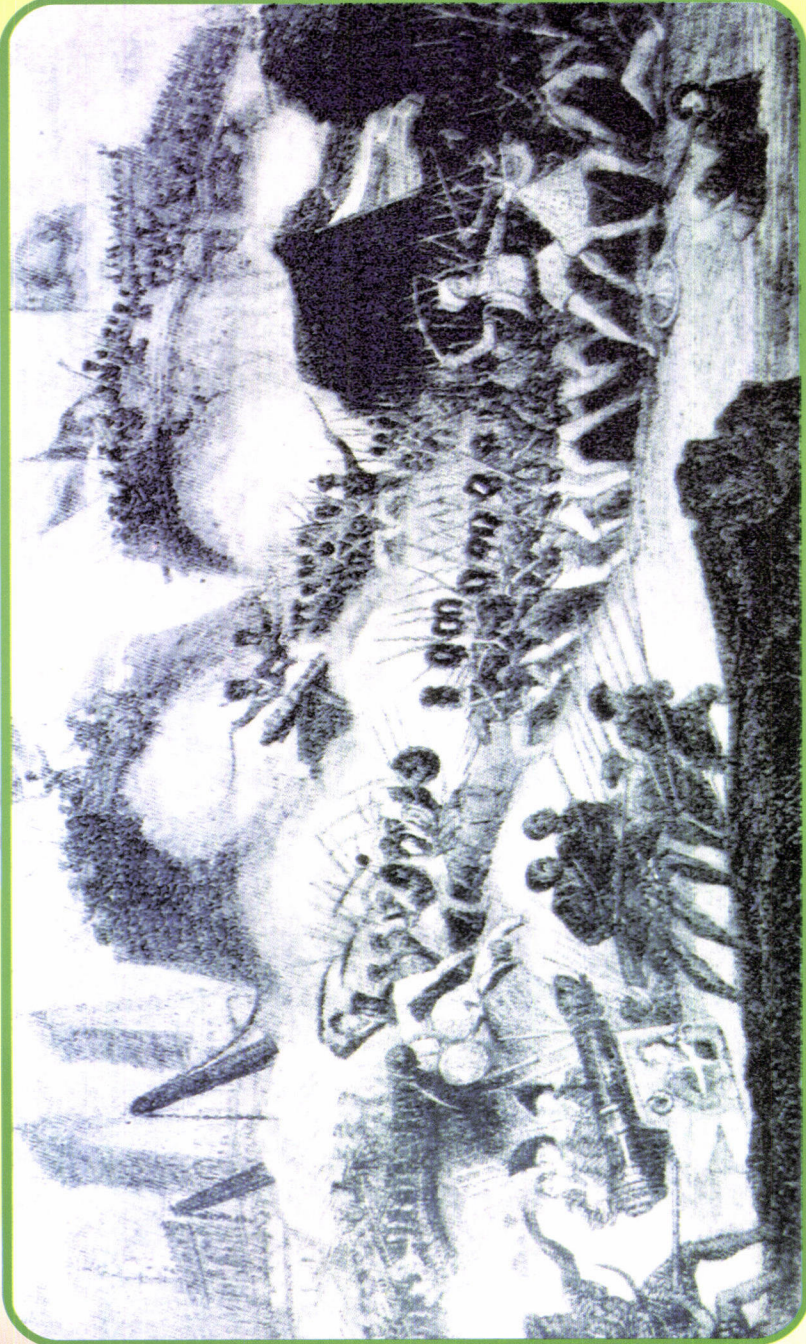

Margriss Wellesley

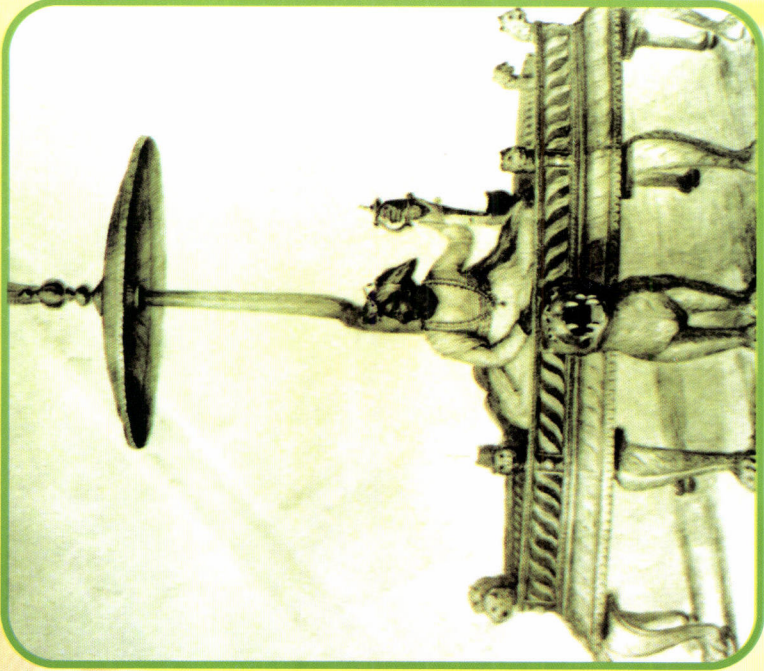

A Mural Paintings of Haider an Tipu, Jagan Mohan Palace Mysore.

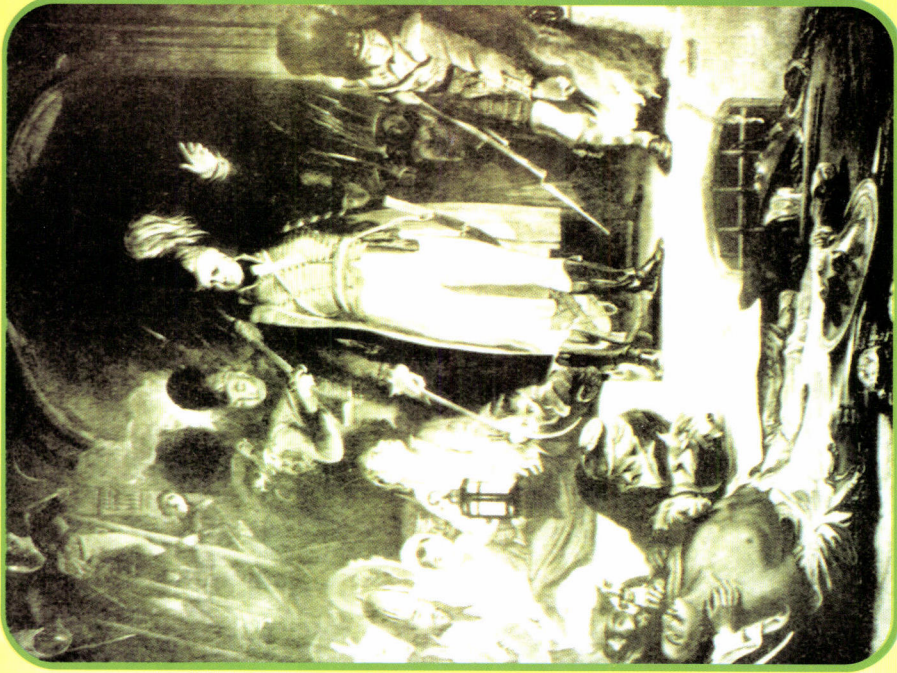

Two Portraits of Dewar Purnaiah in realistic Style as well as Mysore Traditional Style

Storming of Srirangapatana in 1799 by the British Army

Tipu Seated on the Golden Throne,
Srirangapattana

Tipu's dead body inside the palace,
Srirangapattana

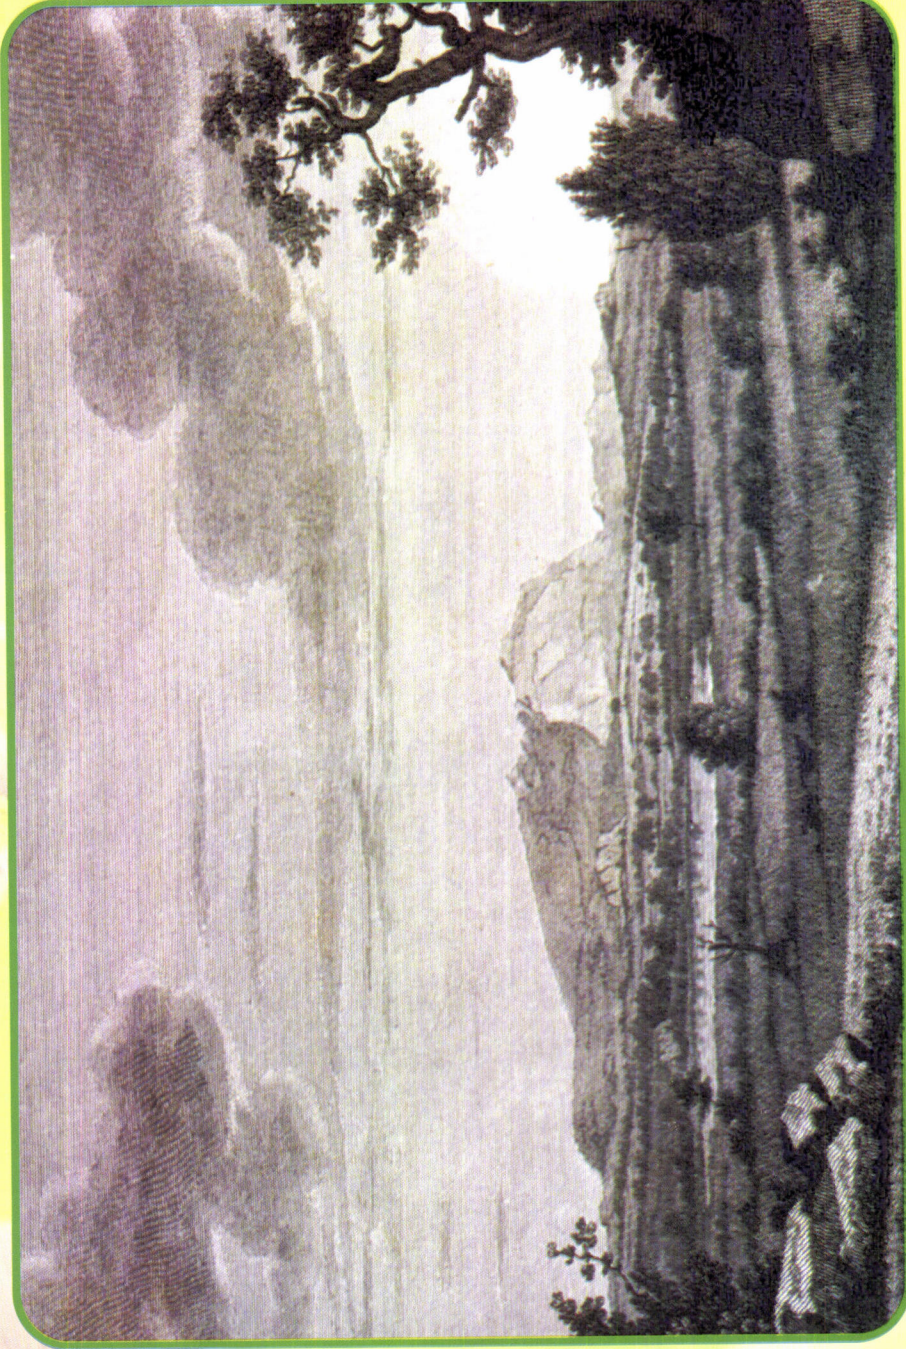

British and Relatives of the Sultan identifying Tipu's body

Tragic Scene of Tipu's body and the grieving Family, Srirangapatana

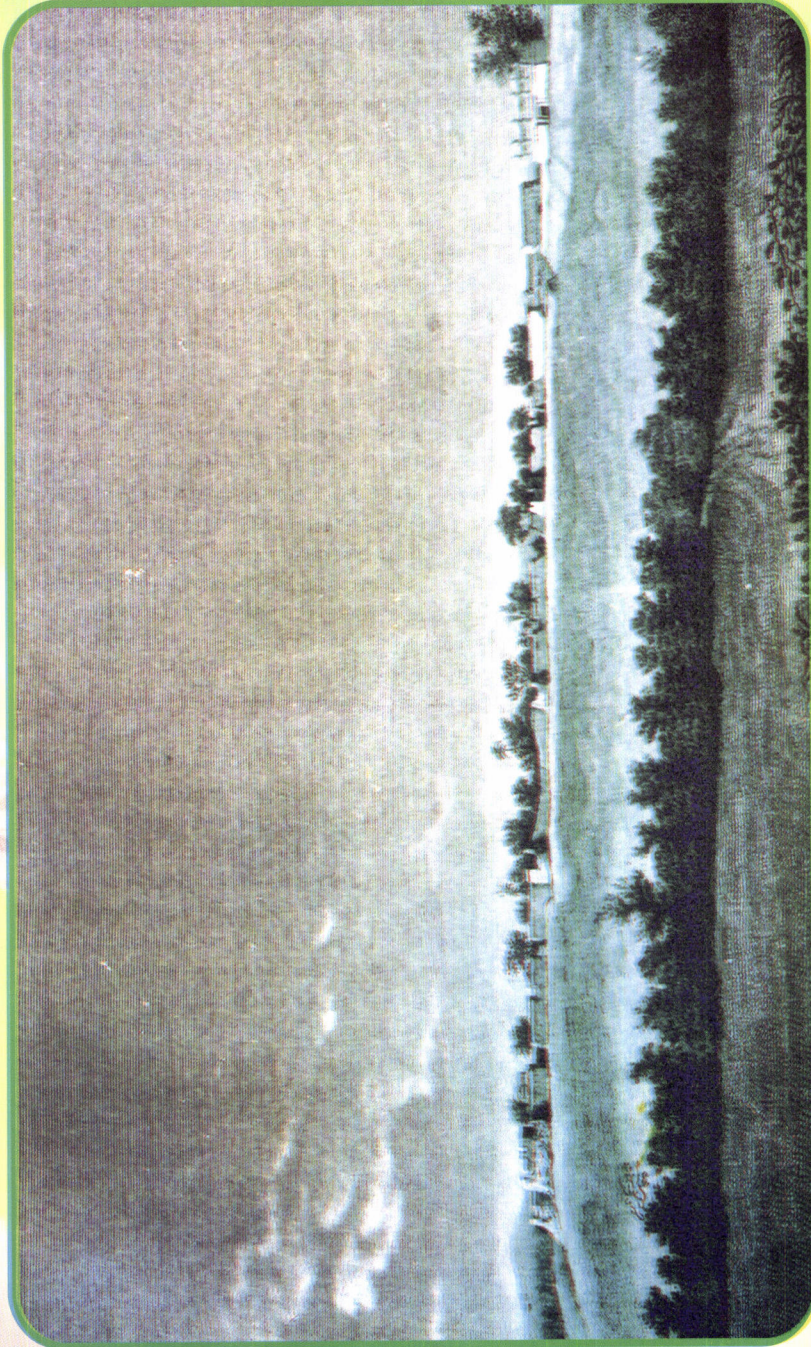

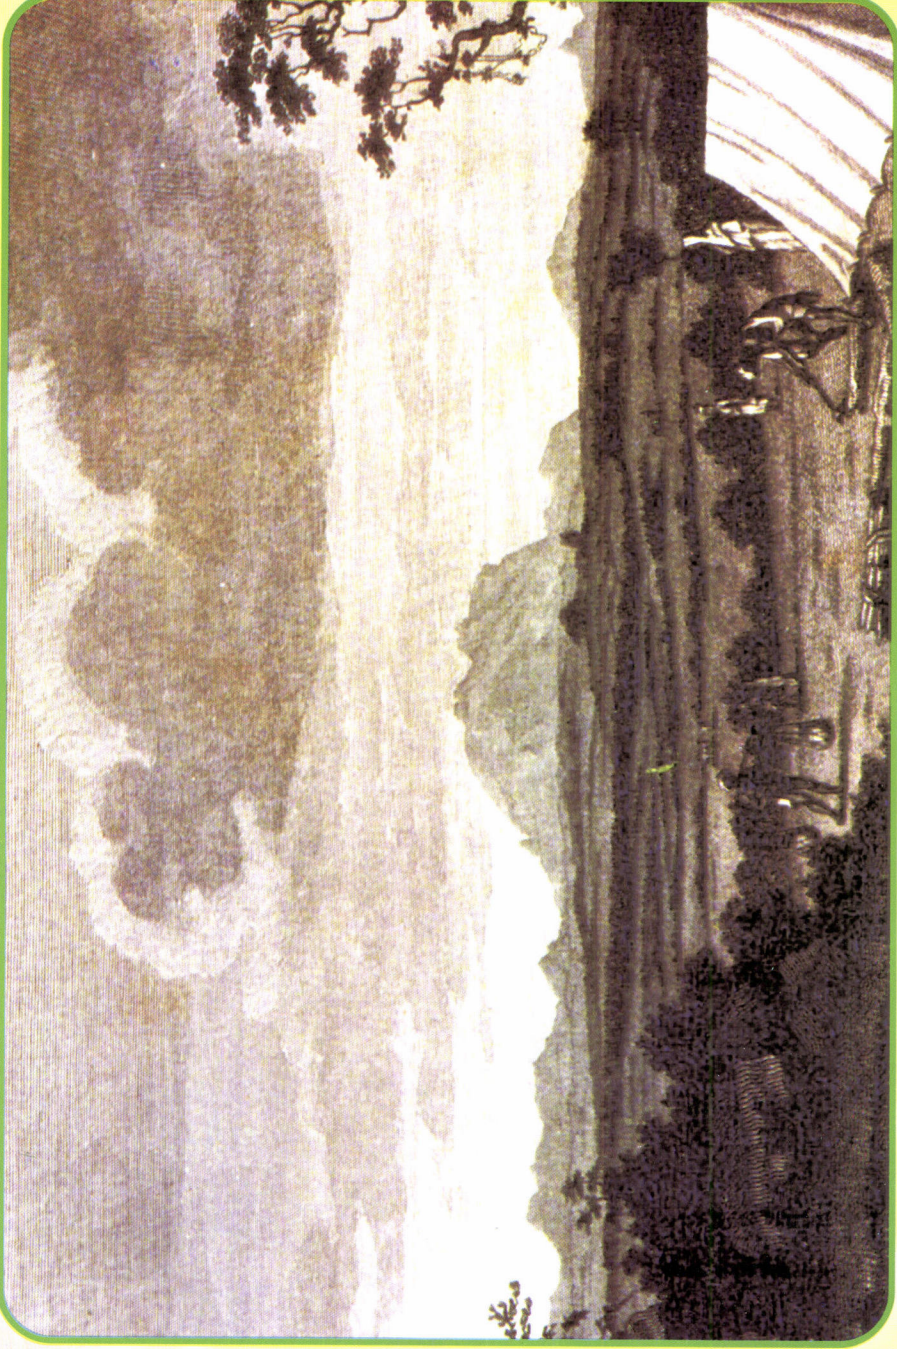

North view of Savanadurga from Magadi

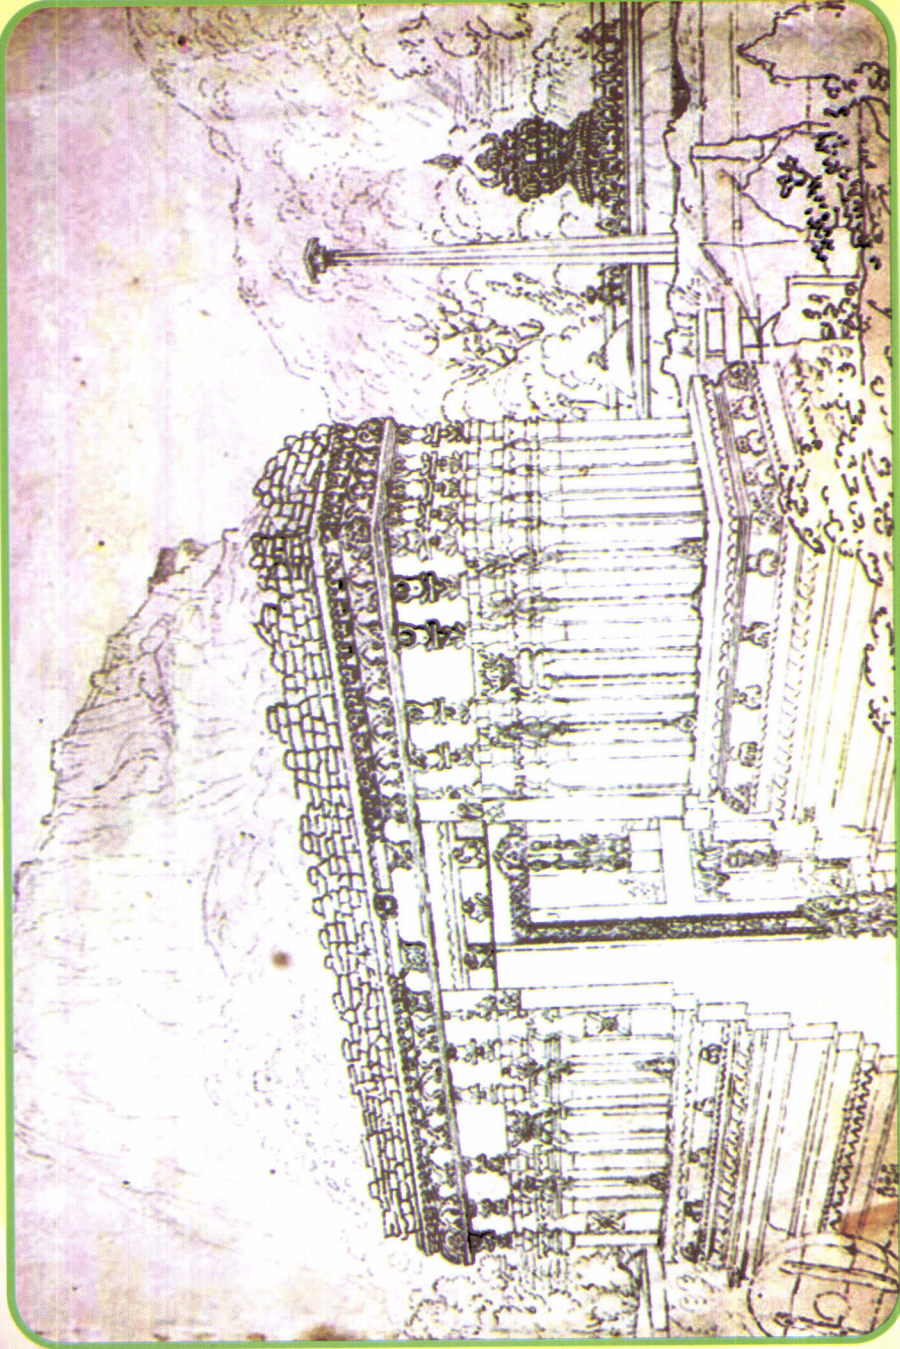

A close view of the Rock Hills of Savanadurga a painting by RH Colebrook (1793)

A distant View of Channapattana Fort

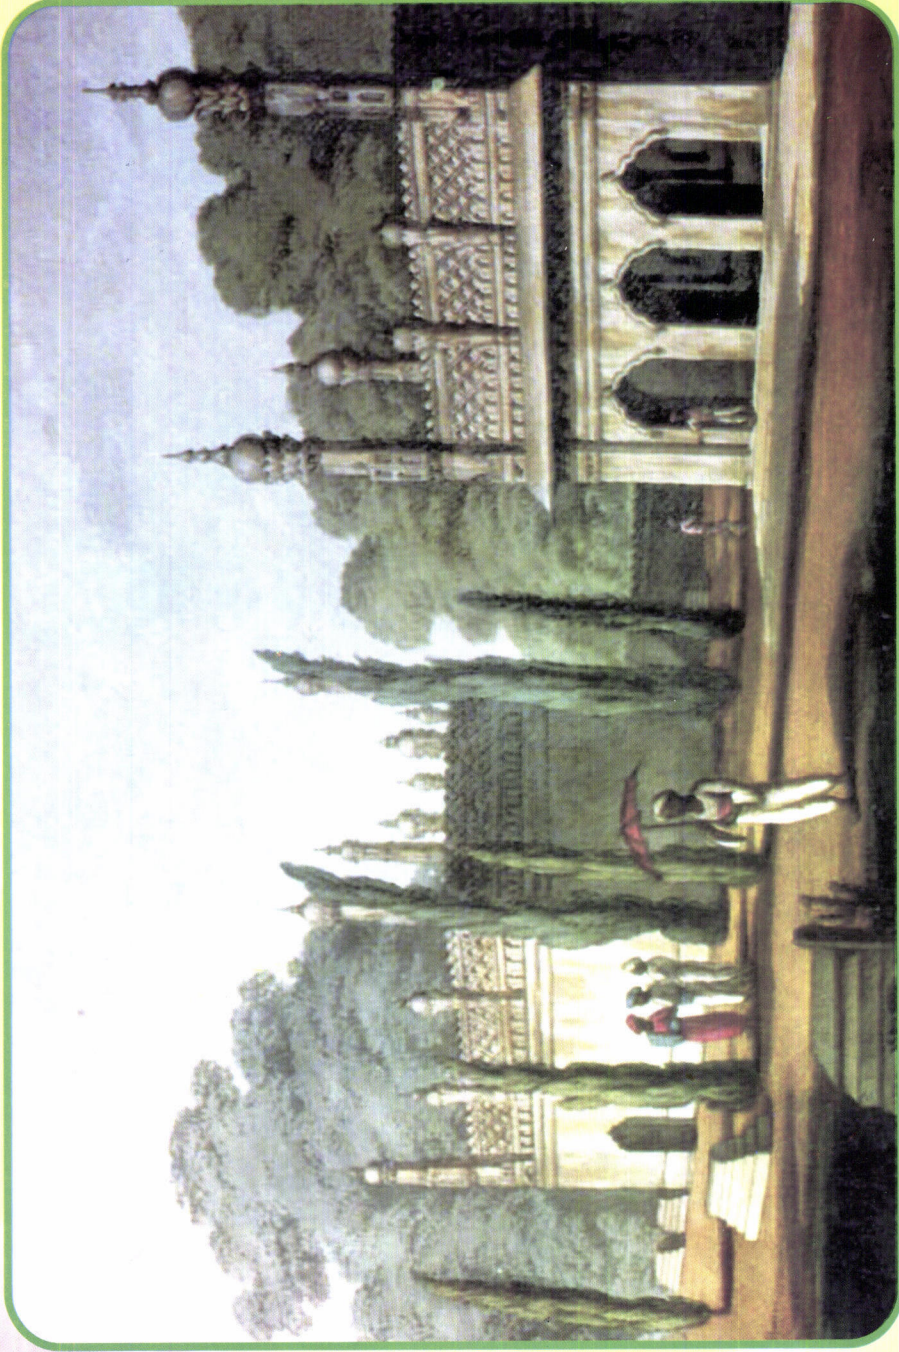

Another Distant View of Savanadurga two days March from Bangalore

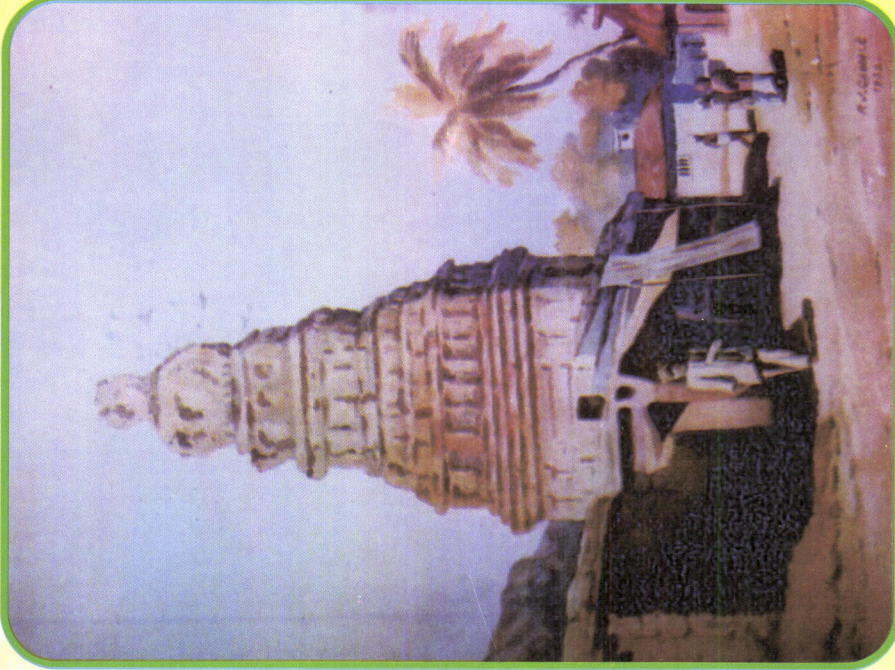

A Front view of Bhoga Nandishwara Temple, Nandihills

Rocky Hill with the remains of the Fort, Madhugiri

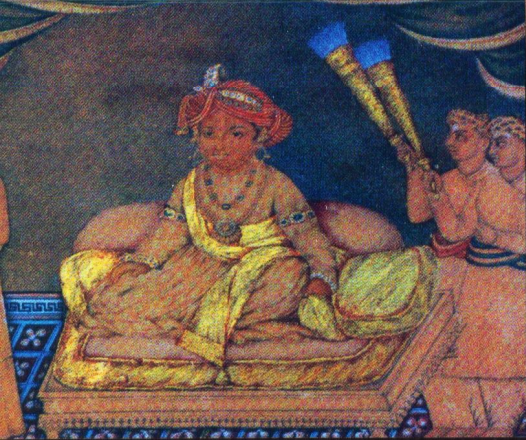

Tombs of Haider's Ancestors including Fate Haider, Kolar

Paintings of P.J.Krole, depicting scene as of Kolar

Buchanan Francis Dr., was born at Branziet, in Stirlingshire, on the 15th of February 1762. His father was a Doctor, and his mother, Elizabeth Hamilton, heiress of Burdowie near Glasgou. As a younger son he took up a profession that of his father's. After receiving his diploma he took his degree at Edinburgh in 1783. He was next appointed surgeon on board a man-of-war, but ill-health compelled him to retire; on his recovery in 1794 he was appointed Surgeon in the E. I. Company's service on the Bengal Establishment. His first service on arrival in India was a mission to the Court of Ava, by which he rendered valuable additions to our knowledge of the plants of the Andamans, Pegu and Ava. He was stationed on the return of the mission at Luckipore, near the mouth of the river Bramaputra, where he wrote an admirable description of the fishes of the river. At the recommendations of Dr. Roxburgh, then Superintendent of the Botanic Garden, he was employed by the Board of Trade at Calcutta to proceed to Chittagong and its vicinity, part of the ancient kingdom of Tripura, which opened a wide field for his botanical and zoological enquiries. In 1800 he was appointed by the Governor General of India, the Marquis Wellesley, to travel through and report upon "the dominions of the then reigning Rajah of Mysore, and the country acquired by the Company in the late war from the Sultan, as well as to that part of Malabar which the Company annexed to their own territories in the former was under Marquis Cornwallis."